The Winter Bird Feeder

Eli built a bird feeder from a clean milk carton during art class.

He cut two wide openings so small birds could reach the seeds safely.

A wooden spoon became a perch below each opening on the carton.

Eli filled the feeder with sunflower seeds and hung it from an oak branch.

The next morning, three sparrows landed together beside the first opening.

A blue jay waited on a nearby fence until the sparrows flew away.

Eli recorded every bird visit in a small notebook by the window.

By Friday, his chart showed that sparrows visited more often than blue jays.
