Testing Water at Willow Creek

Ms. Ortiz led the science club to Willow Creek on a cool spring morning.

The students wore gloves and collected water in three labeled glass jars.

Darius measured the water temperature in a shaded pool near the bank.

The thermometer showed twelve degrees Celsius in the shaded pool.

Another team compared the clarity of creek water with clean tap water.

They found tiny bits of leaves in one jar but no oily film.

Back at school, everyone entered measurements into a shared data table.

The club planned a second visit in summer to compare seasonal changes.
