Mapping the History of the Old Train Depot

Evan visited the town archive on Monday to research the old train depot.

An archivist unfolded a street map printed in 1915 and placed clear weights at its corners.

The map legend used a star for public buildings and a double line for rail tracks.

Evan found the old train depot beside the route now called Cedar Avenue.

A recent map showed that the street name had changed, but the nearby river bend had not.

The archivist asked the students to label every copied fact with its map date.

The group added a short note explaining how the old train depot served the community.

Back in class, they layered tracing paper over both maps to compare the two street patterns.
