Mapping the History of the Fire Station

Caleb visited the town archive on Thursday to research the fire station.

An archivist unfolded a street map printed in 1900 and placed clear weights at its corners.

The map legend used a star for public buildings and a double line for rail tracks.

Caleb found the fire station beside the route now called Cedar Avenue.

A recent map showed that the street name had changed, but the nearby river bend had not.

The archivist asked the students to label every copied fact with its map date.

The group added a short note explaining how the fire station served the community.

Back in class, they layered tracing paper over both maps to compare the two street patterns.
