A Water Check at Maple Pond

Fatima met the science team at Maple Pond on Tuesday morning.

The team filled 8 labeled jars with water from two marked sampling spots.

They used pH strips to collect one measurement from each jar.

A clean white card helped the students compare how clearly they could see through the samples.

One jar looked cloudier than the others, so the team tested it a second time.

Fatima recorded every result in a table before the group left the bank.

The repeated test matched the first reading and ruled out a copying mistake.

The team planned to return after a rainy day to compare the new readings with this baseline.
