Read the passage carefully. Then answer all 8 questions using details from the text.

The School Energy Audit

The student council examined how the school used electricity during one ordinary week.

Teams counted lights, computers, projectors, and fans operating in empty rooms.

The library had twelve computers, but only four entered sleep mode automatically.

A meter showed that an old hallway light used more power than a newer fixture.

Students recorded observations at the same times on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday.

Their report recommended timer settings and reminder signs near classroom doors.

The principal approved a one-month trial before purchasing any new equipment.

During the trial, weekly electricity use fell by eight percent.
