Planning a Community Garden Budget

The community garden committee received six hundred dollars for spring improvements.

Members listed soil, lumber, seeds, gloves, and a replacement water hose.

New cedar boards for two raised beds would cost one hundred eighty dollars.

The committee reserved ninety dollars for soil and compost delivery.

Students compared seed prices from three local stores before choosing packets.

A donated hose allowed the group to remove that item from the budget.

The revised plan kept fifty dollars available for unexpected repairs.

Everyone approved the final budget after checking that total costs stayed below the grant.
